Horse Tours

Stills & Stallions (Horses & Bourbon Tour)

Kentucky is famous for our delicious bourbons and beautiful thoroughbred horses. Join us on our Stills and Stallions tour to experience the best of the Bluegrass. We will journey along a fence-lined Kentucky back road to Old Friends Farm to talk about the history of the industry, tour the stables, and see their thoroughbreds. We will take a trip down the bourbon trail to savor Kentucky's native spirit at Buffalo Trace. We will learn the art and science of bourbon making as we tour the facilities and learn the history of our famous industry. The tour will conclude with samples from the distillery's selection of spirits.

Pick up will be at the Lexington Visitors' Center or Keeneland.

Tour is approximately 4 hours in length.

Water and snacks are provided.

Price: $50 per person (Includes transportation, fees for the horse farm tour, tasting and tour at distillery and water and snacks)

Experience Tours

Culinary Trail of the Commonwealth

Kentucky's culinary scene was a well-kept secret until showcased on Season 16 of Bravo's Top Chef. Throughout the three-month long broadcast, the diversity of Kentucky's exploding food scene was revealed along with some of our most iconic sites. As we salivated through each episode, an idea emerged to combine what we love to do, show off our beautiful state, with what we live to do-eat. Join us as we travel from Lexington to Louisville to savor the cuisine of the celebrity chefs who served as judges on the show. We will have breakfast at Ouita Michel's Midway Bakery, lunch at Edward Lee's Whiskey Dry, dinner at Annie Pettry's Decca and a cocktail at the famous Seelbach Bar. We will work up an appetite by touring Kentucky landmarks: Keeneland, Makers' Mark and the Muhammad Ali Center. This will be a unique experience for the "foodie" in all of us.

Kentucky Monthly Article (August Edition)

Using the services of a tour company seems like a good idea when you travel to a new city. What about using one to get to know your own environs? There are tour companies that whisk visitors all over Kentucky—particularly in the Lexington and Louisville areas—introducing them to the bourbon industry and the horse racing world, along with specialized tours that incorporate craft breweries, wineries, foods and history.

“We recommend tour companies all the time,” said Niki Heichelbech-Goldey, director of communications at VisitLex. “It is a fine way to see everything, and if it involves craft beer or bourbon tasting, you don’t have to worry about driving.”

She said most visitors come to learn more about Kentucky’s horses and bourbon, and the larger tour companies have itineraries that incorporate one or both types of attractions. The smaller companies, on the other hand, can tailor their tours to the group size and visitors’ interests.

In Lexington, Stone Fences Tours has been around for just a year and a half, but the company and its tours were years in the making. Owners Jerry and Hope Daniels traveled the country visiting historical sites before turning their focus on Kentucky. They worked for five years checking out local sites and developing their tours, most of which are history oriented.

“It is natural for us to give tours because this is what we do when we go on vacation,” Jerry said. “We are huge history geeks.”

With Jerry or Hope as your guide, Stone Fences offers a variety of tours that include horses, bourbon, vineyards and craft breweries in its 12-person van. One of the company’s most popular tours is called Bourbon Barons. It takes a look at the family behind an iconic distillery, influential historical women in the industry, or a particular area such as Louisville’s Whiskey Row. An example is the Ripy tour, which includes a visit to the family’s historical mansion in Lawrenceburg followed by a tour and tasting at the former Ripy Brothers Distillery, now known as Wild Turkey Distillery. Other Bourbon Barons tours feature bourbon royalty such as the Beam, Taylor and Pepper families.

“Our tours are small and personal, and you will learn history along the way,” Jerry said. “We love to meet new people and hope they enjoy the tour, but we want them to take a little bit of Kentucky with them.”
